Title: A darkness of dragons

Author: S.A Patrick

Background– This was my favourite book from the beginning of year four because it sparked my love for reading and set my imagination to a whole new level. Also, I wouldn't be where I am in writing without it.

The Setting– Patch is a talented piper who wants to make the world a better place, but is put to jail for playing a forbidden song and is put into jail. However, a significant twist in his story turns his whole world upside down, and sends him on an epic and gruelling journey to stop an evil piper in his tracks.

The Plot-

Patch spends his days saving villages from things like plagues or rodents using his piping skills. But one day when he plays a forbidden song and he is sent to jail. However that doesn't last long: there was a break in at his jail, that sends him spiralling to find of a dreadful truth, and he goes on a troublesome journey to stop the most evil piper in history before he dominates the world.

Comments– This book turned me upside down, because, before I read this book I actually despised reading. However after reading the first thirty pages it just struck me, all of a sudden I just couldn't stop reading the book and it was so riveting that all I could ever think about was " what would happen next,".

Recommendation– I recommend this to any one in year five or six, or maybe even a few keen readers in year four!
